MINOR IN NUTRITION

The minor in Nutrition provides a rigorous and flexible curriculum for students interested in various aspects of nutrition. The minor can enhance students’ understanding of nutrition and broaden career opportunities for students in any discipline. Flexibility of the minor allows students to tailor the curriculum toward numerous aspects of nutrition, including sports nutrition, clinical nutrition, nutrition and health equity, community and public health nutrition, childhood nutrition, and nutrition and aging.

Learn more about the Minor in Nutrition on the Department of Food Science and Human Nutrition website.